

Didier Clamond

Recovery of gravity waves from bottom pressure

Considering steady bidimensional water waves, we show how to use elementary complex analysis to obtain the profile of the free surface from a given pressure field at the seabed.

This method, originally derived for potential flows, is extended to waves with constant vorticity, the latter being also determined solely from the pressure at the bottom.