

Some families of algebraically defined graphs and their applications

Felix Lazebnik

University of Delaware

Abstract

In this talk we discuss a method of building families of graphs using certain systems of polynomial equations over fields. Graphs from these families have found many applications in various parts of graph theory and beyond.

We briefly survey some of the older results, and concentrate on several new ones. Many open problems related to these families of graphs will be mentioned.