

Title: New Kakeya bounds using multilinear and planar estimates

Abstract: A Besicovitch set is a compact subset of \mathbb{R}^n that contains a unit line segment pointing in every direction, and the Kakeya conjecture asserts that every such set must have dimension n . I will discuss some progress on this conjecture, which comes from considering the dimension of the span of lines passing through a typical point.